

OPERATION CRISIS: THE DELEGATE'S PLAYBOOK

TOP SECRET: EYES ONLY

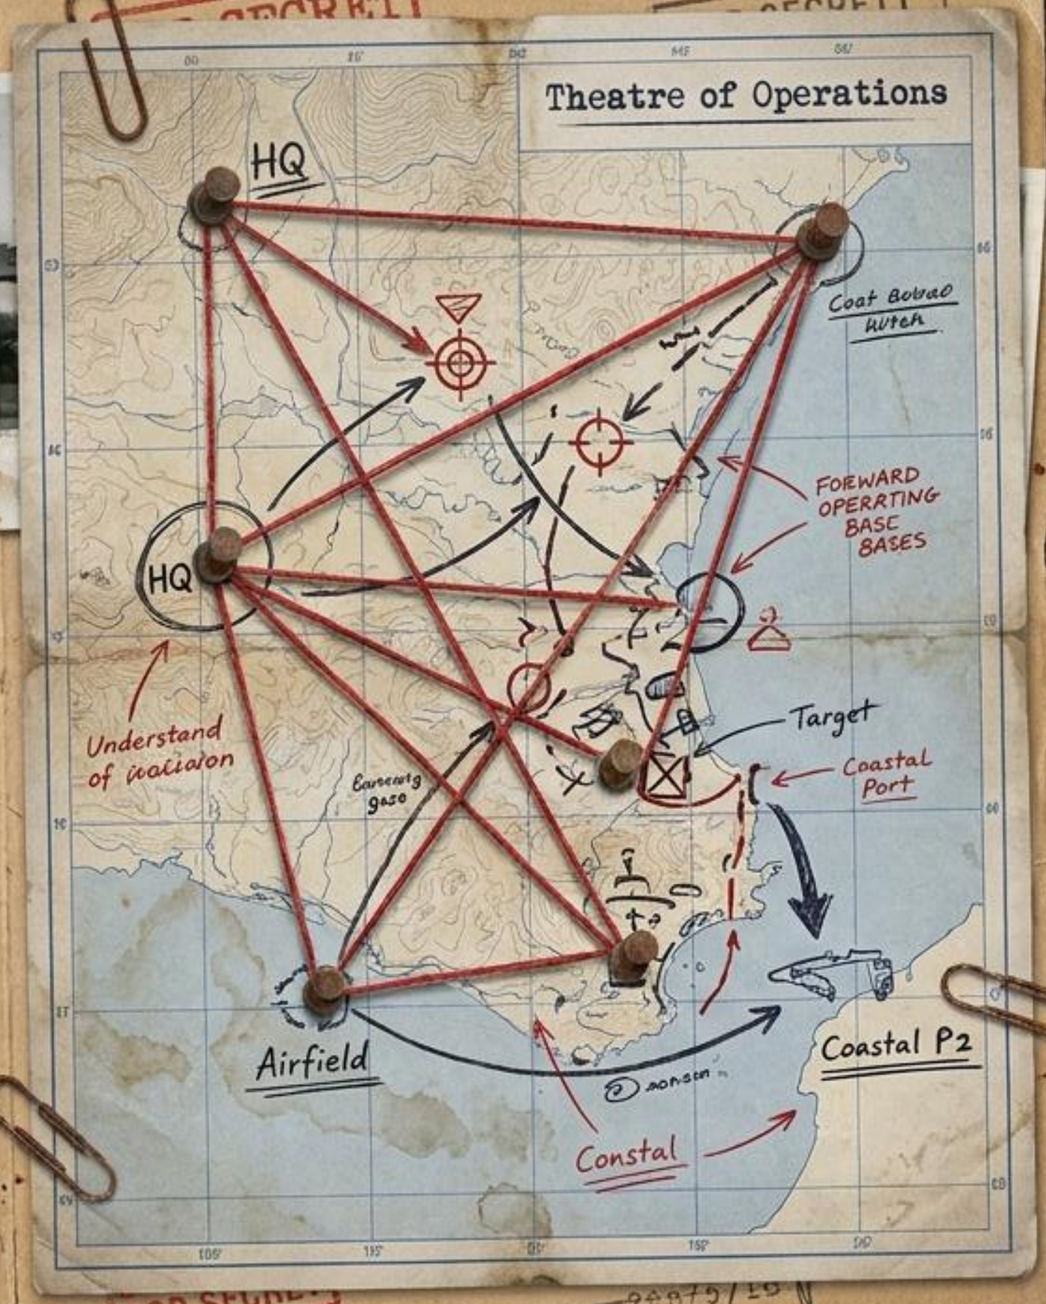

Classified Briefing Document.
Strategic Intelligence for the War Room.

THE THEATRE OF WAR (UNDERSTANDING CRISIS)

Crisis committees move fast, punish passivity, and reward the operative who strikes first.

There is no predetermined outcome. The agenda is not fixed. It is a live battlefield shaped entirely by your actions, directives, and the backroom's responses.

A single directive can trigger a military operation, an economic sanction, or a coup. A careless press release can expose a covert operation or collapse an alliance.

ENGAGEMENT RULES: STANDARD VS. IRREGULAR WARFARE

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

- Representation: Country or bloc
- Primary Output: Draft resolutions
- The Agenda: Fixed from the start
- Pace & Rules: Structured, deliberate, formal procedure

CRISIS COMMITTEE

- Representation: Individual portfolio—you are a specific person
- Primary Output: Directives and press releases
- The Agenda: Evolves in real-time
- Pace & Rules: Fast, reactive, flexible procedure

Strategic Takeaway: In GA, you debate a static problem. In Crisis, you are inside a living situation.

YOUR ASSIGNMENT: YOU ARE NOT A COUNTRY

Your powers come entirely from your individual character's real-world remit (Minister, General, Spy Chief).

PORTFOLIO POWER

What you can legally order. A Finance Minister cannot authorize a military strike. Acting outside your scope wastes a directive and exposes poor preparation.

PORTFOLIO KNOWLEDGE

What you actually know at the freeze date. You may know historical outcomes; your character does not.

FATAL ERROR: ACTING ON META-KNOWLEDGE.

If you act on outside knowledge, you risk immediate elimination (assassination or recall).

TOP SECRET

THE OPERATIVE'S ARSENAL

WEAPON I: PRESS RELEASES (PUBLIC FACING)

Visible to all portfolios and the public. Not subject to dias approval.

Strategic Use: Pre-empt rival announcements, shape the public narrative, and commit to a position before others contest it.

WEAPON 2: DIRECTIVES (TACTICAL ORDERS)

Explicit orders issued to your subordinates to interact with the simulated world.

Strategic Use: The primary mechanism for changing reality. Triggers backroom action and material results.

ANATOMY OF A LETHAL DIRECTIVE

Deploy two infantry battalions to the northern corridor within 48 hours, with orders to detain...

Objective: What is the exact goal? (Primary/Secondary).

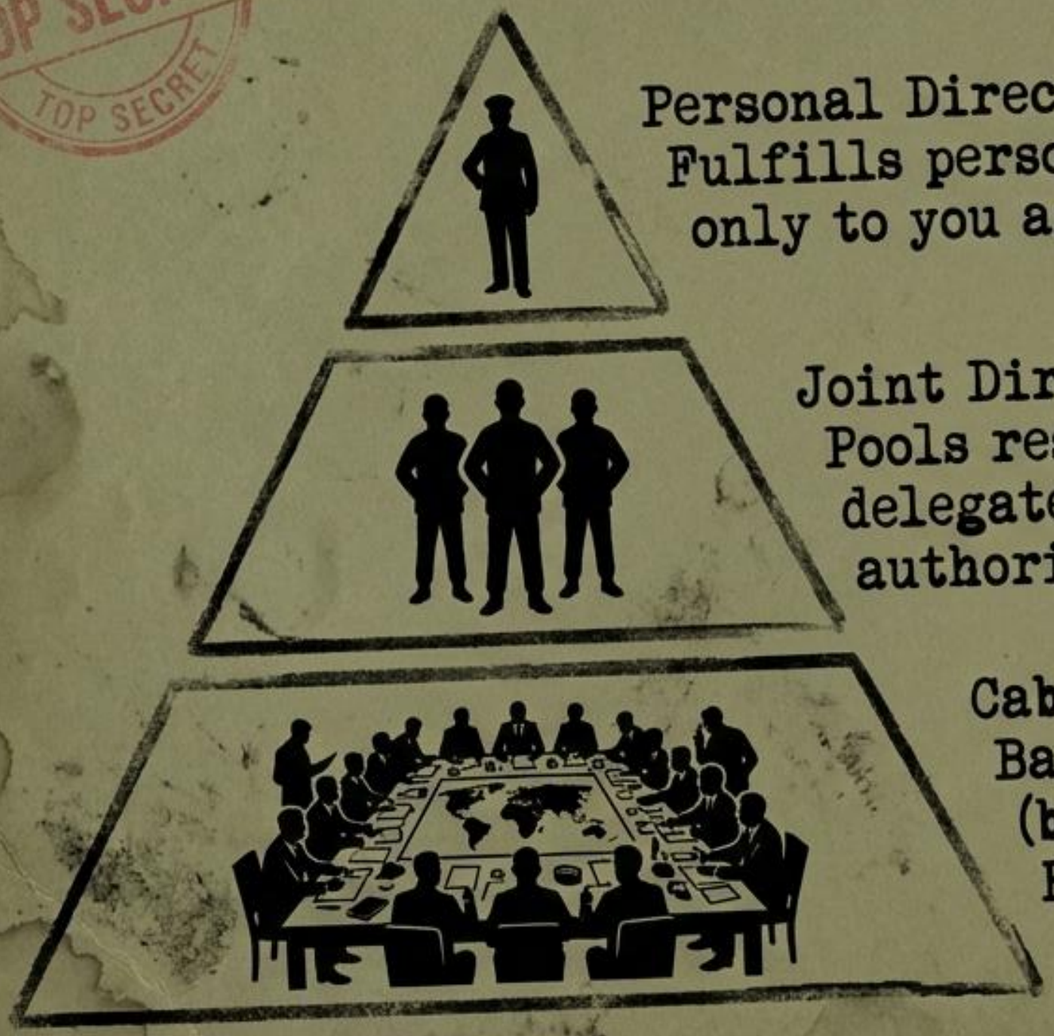

Resources: What does it cost and where do the funds come from?

Agents: Who specifically implements it? (Subordinates are not automatons; they will mutiny against impossible orders).

Timeline: By when? (Immediate / 48 hours / 7 days).

Execution: Step-by-step plan of action.

CHAIN OF COMMAND: DIRECTIVE SCOPE

Personal Directives (You -> Backroom): Secret. Fulfills personal or cabinet interests. Visible only to you and the crisis staff.

Joint Directives (You + Allies -> Backroom): Pools resources. Usually written by one delegate but signed by a few to combine authority across different departments.

Cabinet Directives (Entire Room -> Backroom): Large-scale operations (battle plans, major taxation). Requires approval by the entire cabinet or the Chair.

Overt Actions (Daylight):
Transparent decisions shared with the entire committee once approved. Represents collective will.

Builds your public reputation and forces rivals to react to your framing.

TOP SECRET

TRANSPARENCY VS. DISCRETION

Covert Actions (Shadows):
Sent directly to the backroom. The silent movers crafted for discretion. Nobody sees them unless a rival runs an intelligence directive against you, or the backroom leaks it.

PRE-INVASION CHECKLIST

Phase 1: Obsessive Recon

Read your portfolio worldview and research the exact freeze date (conflicts, pressures).

Phase 2: Network Mapping

Identify who shares your objectives, who controls your needed resources, and who will move against you.

Phase 3: Reverse-Engineering

Define your ultimate endgame objective, then work backward to plot required directives.

Phase 4: Pre-Drafting

Arrive with 2-3 opening directives ready (one intel, one comms, one contingency).

Phase 5: First Strike

The first session belongs to whoever acts first.

belongs to whoever acts first. Submit immediately.

SYSTEM SYNTHESIS: THE RIPPLE EFFECT

War Room
(Delegate)

Directive Submitted
(Initial Build-Up)

You submit directives to set up the foundation of a plan.

Backroom Analysis
(The Engine)

The backroom is not a problem-solver; it is the engine of the crisis arc. Your directives are the fuel. Analyzes feasibility, mechanics, and scope.

Crisis Update
(Continuation & Ripple Effect)

Directives rarely yield a simple "pass" or "fail". Unpredictable ripple effects emerge through crisis updates injected back into the room.

CASUALTY REPORTS:
HOW TO GET ELIMINATED (PART I)
Blunder 1: Acting on Meta-Knowledge
Using historical hindsight rather than freeze-date intelligence destroys credibility and triggers elimination.
REJECTED
Blunder 2: Vague Directives
"Secure the border" is not an order. If the backroom has to fill in the blanks, they will not fill them in your favor.
K.I.A.
Blunder 3: Premature Covert Ops
Launching shadow attacks in session one before establishing defensive intelligence or knowing who your rivals are.
REJECTED

CASUALTY REPORTS:
HOW TO GET ELIMINATED (PART II)
Blunder 4: Overextending Without Protection
"Every aggressive action earns enemies. Build alliances and defenses before you strike.
Blunder 5: Ignoring the Press Release
"Letting rivals control the narrative framing. The operative who defines the story first forces everyone else to react.
Blunder 6: Solo Warfare
"Forgetting that the war room is a political environment. Success requires quiet alliances and shared intelligence."

THE COMMANDER'S CREDO

Every plan breaks on contact with the backroom.

- - Always think two moves ahead.
- - Have a fallback for every operation that matters.
- - Build before you strike.

GOOD LUCK, OPERATIVE.
The War Room awaits.
Prepare your portfolio.
